

DR. MCGONEGAL'S TURN NOW.

THE PROSECUTION RESTS IN THE ANNIE GOODWIN CASE.

The Removal of the Body at Night and the Burialing for a Cheap Funeral, Together With the Results of the Answer to the Jury.

District Attorney Fellows last night rested the case for the people against Dr. Henry G. McGonegal, who is accused of killing Annie Goodwin, the charrette girl. It now remains for Dr. McGonegal's counsel to outline their defense. District Attorney Fellows promised to introduce some important evidence yesterday, and the demand for sequester began an hour before the trial opened. The doors were guarded by policemen, and many of those who were fortunate enough to get in kept their seats during the noon recess.

Dr. McGonegal was brought from the Tombs by the deputy sheriff looking a little more bleached and worn, but full of energy. The evidence yesterday was for the most part concerning the inquest, and Dr. McGonegal made frequent suggestions to his counsel during the cross-examination.

The first witness yesterday was Mrs. Shaw's little boy-of-all-work, Albert Harris, who said he was 16 years old. He told his story in a straightforward way, and defined the efforts of Mr. Oliver to get him to say "I don't know if you live last night?" asked District Attorney Fellows.

"With Mrs. Shaw, at 117 East 105th street."

"Did you ever see Dr. McGonegal there?"

"Yes, he has brought Annie Goodwin to the house. I saw him five or six times."

Harris said that Dr. McGonegal came to the house about two o'clock in the morning. "I was bad," said Mrs. Shaw, "she woke me up, put on my clothes, and I went to the station. She stood in front of the house. Dr. McGonegal was upstairs at the time. I saw him come down carrying Annie Goodwin, who was wrapped in a sheet, and sticking out of the quilt that the body was wrapped in, and he was recovering."

"What do you do with the body?"

"I don't see him put it in the sink. I am positive that it was Dr. McGonegal's idea to have him seen in it a number of times."

Burieraker Cornelius Merritt was asked by District Attorney Fellows at what time of night Dr. McGonegal brought the body to his office.

It was between 1 and 2 o'clock on the morning of Sunday, July 13," he said. "The body was shown to me in a sheet, and I took it to the morgue. A blanket was wrapped around it. Dr. McGonegal said to me: 'Well, Mr. Merritt, the poor woman is dead. Here's the certificate. You can have her buried.' I said, 'Yes, and said that he had a charity patient who was dying. He said: 'I've got a charity patient, a poor woman who is dying of inflammation of the lungs. What do you think?' I figured a while, and said 'I would do it for $25.' 'Make it $25,' he said, 'she's a poor woman without money.'

"What was the cause of death? 'I asked District Attorney Fellows.

"It was caused by peritonitis, following an appendectomy."

District Attorney Fellows then announced that he would rest the case for the people, and the court was adjourned until this morning.

SALESMAN BROWN'S SUICIDE.

Cashed Two Worthless Checks Instantly, His Employers Think.

Outside of financial difficulties no reason can be assigned for the suicide of Michael Brown, the young cloth salesman in Lord &amp; Taylor's Broadway store who shot himself in his room at the Hotel Penn in Reading, Pa., on Monday evening last. Although a number of letters from different women were found in Brown's possession, his fellow salesmen about the idea that a love affair may have been the cause of his act.

Brown left his place in Lord &amp; Taylor's store about a week ago. He had been employed there for about six years and was highly esteemed by his employer and co-workers. On the day before his suicide he cashed a check of the store cashed a check for about $5 for him. It was on the Second National Bank, and was drawn in the name of F. H. Harris. The bank returned it with a note written across the face. Brown expressed great surprise when informed of this, and said he had given the check in good faith for a friend. He promised to return the money, but didn't. The day after the first check was cashed, Brown purchased a check for $10, cashed it at a cashier's. This was in the same handwriting as the other, but signed by another name. The second check was cashed $50, paid $30, stereo $20, and $20 to his employer.
